

Section Review

In this section, you defined ethics. You focused on how to maintain integrity within your position and within your company, not simply adhering to what is legal but also recognizing what is right and wrong. You learned to differentiate between the various relationships you may experience in your role and identify the set of ethics necessary for each interaction, as well as pinpoint possible issues that may arise. You also learned why adhering to a company policy is a safeguard for both your employer and you and how to put systems in place that assure confidentiality, integrity, and availability that will appeal to end users, creating a trustworthy experience in a world where breaches happen often and cybersecurity is of paramount importance.
